Though wild camping is off the cards in Wales, there are plenty of places to pitch that feel far-flung and steeped in nature — if you know where to look. So, settle in for starry skies at these 12 beautiful Welsh campsites.

With its ancient woodlands, dramatic coastline and glassy lakes, there's something truly distinctive about the Welsh wilds. The country holds some of the UK's oldest national parks — Snowdonia, Brecon Beacons and the Pembrokeshire Coast — all founded in the 1950s, protecting around 20% of all the country's land. And, though wild camping is illegal in Wales, as is the case across most of the UK, there are plenty of places to stay that feel far-flung and steeped in nature. Sites offering just a handful of pitches often tick the most boxes in terms of personality, views and seclusion. With this in mind, we've rounded up some of the wildest spots in Wales for a scenic — and delightfully rugged — camping experience. Wrap up, gather round the campfire and settle in for some beautiful starry skies at these 12 camping grounds.

1. Aberbran Fawr, Brecon Beacons

Walking, mountain biking and horse-riding trails are all close to this peaceful campsite, just three miles from the historic cathedral town of Brecon. And for the more adventurous, caving tours are an option in the forest and waterfall strewn area. Opt to pitch your tent in the meadow opposite the River Usk, with panoramic countryside views. From mid-June to August, you can even pick your own fruits from the farm to tuck into during your stay. £9 per night per adult. aberbranfawr.co.uk

2. Brynglas Retreat, Glamorgan

Set in the foothills of the Black Mountains, this campervan campsite describes itself as 'semi-wild'. While it's set up for motorhomes, it's also in harmony with its wild surroundings, offering wildflower meadows, a stream, a compost toilet and non-electric pitches. Only over-25s are allowed to stay here, a convenient 10-minute drive from Brecon Beacons National Park. There's a communal barbecue and firepit as well as a red kite feeding station, plus plenty of walking routes nearby. Dogs are allowed, too. From £12 for one
