Source map scale

The historical maps shown were reissued at the scale adopted for England, Wales and Northern Ireland, the 1:2,500 scale was adopted for use to update the 1:10,560 maps, often some years later than the survey. The maps were based on the Cassini Project, which was a county or group of counties, giving areas. In the late 1940's, a Provisional 1:10,560 mapping from a number of maps were initially overprinted with 1:10,000 maps were produced using the revision process continued until revision 10 years or so for urban areas.

The historical maps shown were reprinted at the scale adopted for England. Until the 1:2,500 scale was adopted for Scotland, it was used to update the 1:10,560 maps. However, often some years later than the surveys, they were based on the Cassini Project maps of a county or group of counties, giving a more detailed area. In the late 1940's, a Provisional Revision of the 1:10,560 mapping from a number of unfinished - with all military camps and fortifications - maps were initially overprinted with the 1:10,000 maps were produced using the revision process continued until reprinted 10 years or so for urban areas.

The map is a detailed historical plan of the Tai-Bach area in Cardiff, Wales. It shows the city's layout, including streets, buildings, and infrastructure. Key features include:

- Tai-Bach: The central urban area, with a pink rectangle highlighting a specific location.
- Margam Wharf: A large industrial area on the left side of the map.
- Works: A large industrial area at the bottom left.
- Tai-Bach C: A large area on the right side of the map, possibly a park or open space.
- Reservoir (covered): A large body of water in the upper right.
- Pillow Mounds: A large area on the right side of the map, possibly a park or open space.
- Grid System: A grid of purple lines forming concentric circles and a network of straight lines. The grid is labeled with letters T, W, and Y, and numbers 1876, 1880, 1882, 1884, 1886, 1888, 1890, 1892, 1894, and 1896.
