Source map scale

VectorMap Local (Raster) is Ordnance Survey's latest mapping product. These maps are derived from a simple vector dataset at a nominal scale of 1:25,000 across Great Britain, that has been designed to be used at a larger scale. VectorMap Local is derived from large scale (covering major towns and cities) and small scale (covering rural areas) and 1:50,000 river estuary areas).

The historical maps shown were reprojected at the scale adopted for England, Wales and the 1:2,500 scale was adopted for Scotland. The maps covered the whole of what were called the counties of Britain. The published date given by the Ordnance Survey was the date of the last surveyed date. Before 1938, all OS maps were projected using the Ordnance Survey Projection, with independent surveying methods giving rise to significant inaccuracies.

The historical maps shown were reprojected at the scale adopted for England and Wales. The 1:2,500 scale was adopted for the whole of what were called the Channel Islands. The published date given by the Ordnance Survey is the surveyed date. Before 1938, all OS maps were projected using the Transverse Mercator Projection, with independent surveying errors giving rise to significant inaccuracies.

This is a detailed black and white map of a residential area in Port Talbot, Wales. The map shows a network of streets including Water Street, Woodfield Street, Penryn Street, Somerset Street, Glanafon Street, and Wood Street. A large railway line, labeled 'PORT TALBOT RAILWAY', runs diagonally across the lower left. A prominent purple circle is drawn around a central area, and a pink rectangle highlights a specific building. The map includes various labels for buildings, such as 'Gas Works (Disused)', 'School', and 'TAIBACH'. Numerical annotations are scattered throughout, including house numbers and street names. The map is overlaid with a grid and various numerical annotations.
