

Potential view through trees towards folly from Visitor Centre

Views to the Ivy Tower

Situated to the north-east of the park, the Ivy Tower is a 2-storey castellated summer house which was built c.1780 as an eye-catcher folly within the grounds of Gnoll House. As such, the folly has historically been a significant and constant feature within the parkland. Due to its elevated position within the landscape it offers views across Gnoll Estate Country Park and, in return, can be viewed from key areas within the parkland. There is potential to engage visitors with the folly through long distance views from the Visitor Centre.

Historic photograph showing view of the Ivy Tower from the Fishpond (Peter Davis Collection, no date)

View of Ivy tower from Main Car Park