

View from the car park to the existing visitor centre

View from the east, looking towards the visitor centre.

Key views into the site

Due to its position on the bank of the reservoir, adjacent to a break in the tree-line, the visitor centre is visible from the paths around Fish Pond. Glimpsed views through the trees are found from the eastern and western bank, whilst the dam to the south of the reservoir creates unobstructed views back to the building. Views from the car park, are relatively restricted due to existing vegetation and topography, but as a potentially important approach to any proposed building should be given significant weight.

View from the dam to the south of Fish Pond

View from the eastern bank through trees

View from the west, looking towards the visitor centre, with the play park and hollow tree to the foreground